TO

DR. H. B. JONES

A DEDICATION

B.A., Wake Forest College, 1910; M.A., University of Chicago, 1920; Ph.D., University of Chicago, 1924; Instructor in Latin, Culowhee Normal School, 1912-17; Head of Department of English, ibid., 1917-20; Professor of English and Head of the Department, Simpson College, 1921-24; Professor of English, Wake Forest College, since 1924.

IN HIS QUIET and unassuming way Dr. Henry Broadus Jones has long since become a vital part of the Wake Forest College tradition. His nineteen years of teaching English here have firmly established the true permanence of his contributions to the school.

Those who have been in best position to observe him as teacher, administrator, and committeeman know how well Dr. Jones has filled his place without fanfare and without ostentation. It has remained for these associates and students to catch for themselves the fullest appreciation of his abilities and to make expression of his worth as a teacher and as a man.

In the classroom Dr. Jones has brought a better understanding of and a closer acquaintance with the giants of English literature—Shakespeare and Milton and Wordsworth and Shelley and Keats and Tennyson and Browning. He has scoffed at the idea that these men were set apart in “a golden clime,” and has interpreted them as strongly sensitive individuals as human as ourselves. He has held their works to the light of keen analytical study and at the same time has sacrificed none of the beauties and truths which lie in them.

Apart from his teaching, Dr. Jones has been an untiring worker in the administrative program of the college. An examination of the personnel of important faculty committees for the last two decades will reveal that he has served on a surprisingly large number of them. Anyone, for instance, who has visited Dr. Jones in his office during the last few weeks before the college catalogue is issued will remember that his desk was always filled with notes on curricula and with information about Wake Forest.

In this perplexing college year of 1942-43, Dr. Jones has typified the spirit of calmness and resolution and determination in the face of the many problems which have jolted Wake Forest since the War began. It has been his sincerest conviction that the college must and will hold up under all the strains of war, no matter how taxing they may be. And his faith in the future is unbounded.

It is with respect for his many talents and gratitude for his wide uses of them that this, the forty-first issue of THE HOWLER, is dedicated to Dr. H. B. Jones.

IN 1942-43 AMERICA

WAS AT WAR

the Axis in Libya. This was the year which saw the R.A.F., with the aid of American pilots and American flying fortresses, return to Germany the bombings England had for years been receiving. This was the year of the war's turning point.

But more than anything else, 1942-43 will go down in history as the year in which the "arsenal of democracy" became for the first time the fighting sword of freedom. Men of America went to the Solomons, to New Guinea, to Tunisia, and over all the world's oceans; they engaged the enemy; they proved their mettle and their valor; and they continued victorious. Their bravery under fire gave to all Americans for all time the courage to believe in the rights of man and the faith to look ahead with optimism and with confidence in a just and undying cause.

A WORLD that loved peace had again come face to face with war. Lives filled with joy and laughter and love and hope had come to know death and sorrow and frustration. The very universe was threatened by power-mad dictators with loss of law and order.

The year—1942-43—was a crucial year in this, the most chaotic of all the world's wars. It was the year in which Russia rose up in strength on the steppes at Stalingrad and chased the Germans to their first great defeat. This was the year in which the British Eighth Army routed

We were affected by the war

Coach Phil Utley does his patriotic bit as air raid warden by posting blackout warnings.

LIFE at Wake Forest was changed this year, too. There was no doubt about it. From the moment Dean Bryan announced in chapel that a division of the Army Finance School would settle down here in August, we knew that we were in for a new kind of experience—adapting ourselves and our school work to wartime conditions. And when the soldiers did arrive, we saw that we faced still another new experience—the feeling of sacrifice.

By December we had given up our cafeteria, our gymnasium, our dormitories, our just-completed music-religion building, and two of our clas-room buildings. Five fraternities, forced out of Simmons, had had to find new houses. We found ourselves deprived of home basketball, taking physical education outdoors, eating in restaurants downtown, and rearranging our mode of life.

But with all the shattering changes it brought about, the war had at least one wholesome effect. By keeping us closer to school, by cutting out much of our fun, it made us more conscious of the principles Wake Forest stands for in war as well as in peace. We came to appreciate more the place of a Christian college in the world's culture, and we looked forward to the day when Wake Forest could once again take up its task of education with all the resources at hand.

We did our part in sending men

ALMOST every day men left Wake Forest to serve in the armed forces. Many were drafted, some were called up in reserves, and others just volunteered. Ten of our professors—Allen, Archie, Berry, Black, Copeland, Githens, Hagood, Isbell, Parcell, and Weaver—exchanged their classrooms for service posts.

And from the fighting fronts we heard of the exploits of other Wake Forest men—of Generals Frank Armstrong and Caleb Haynes, and of the many privates and seamen and pilots and marines who were earning their places on America's roll of honor.

But we still

YES, THE WAR PLAYED havoc with convention and normalcy. It upset many of our oldest traditions. But we soon learned to adapt ourselves and found that in so doing we could still preserve most of the best features of the college life we loved—the friendly spirit of the Wake Forest campus, the cooperation of faculty and students, the interest of our extracurricular activities. And we ourselves were actually much the same as in former years: we still moaned about 8:30 classes; we still opened our postoffice boxes with bated breath; we still enjoyed our midnight snacks at Shorty's; we still thrilled to the sound of foot meeting ball in a kickoff and to the voice of a professor saying "No class tomorrow."

We were, above all, still concerned with getting an education. And so it happened that the year 1942-43 became for us not so much a year of war as another rewarding episode in our own lives and in the history of Wake Forest.

WE RETURNED TO SCHOOL

Arrival in Wake Forest: Freshman Jack Isley pushes luggage toward new home.

Emharkation on a college career: Freshman Isley walks through arch to greet the new life that awaits him.

EARLY in September every year, the sleepy little town of Wake Forest is roused from its August nap by the sounds of Negro boys carting trunks up the road, car doors slamming, boys yelling from windows "Hey, Dad, bring up my tennis racket," and mothers shouting anxiously back from automobiles "Be a good boy and don't forget to write." The people of the town know what all the excitement means, for they have seen it happen year in and year out. It is another freshman class beginning its four years at Wake Forest.

The first few weeks of school belong to this freshman class. The sophomores and the juniors and the seniors have held their places in the limelight in years past; now it is another class's turn. Either the freshmen take full advantage of it from the start, or they soon find themselves forced to by superior upperclassmen. They go through the procedures of registration and matriculation and formally become students. They face orientation, which is partly instructive and partly horseplay and which serves to teach them their place in the scheme of things on the campus. Then they are free to grow and develop for themselves.

September, 1942, was little different from other years in these respects. To be sure, there were alterations in campus life. The finance soldiers were all over the place. There were coeds in larger number, and now they had a dormitory to themselves. The new Music-Religion Building had been completed and turned over immediately to the Army. The air was electric with war.

Something new has been added. Coeds Carolyn Vick, Marina Hawkins, Viola Hopkins, and Lois Bradley, at Wake Forest for the first time, get musical in new coed residence on Faculty Avenue.

Freshman Advisory Chairman Johnny Walker helps to orient J. N. Lasater. Stacy Kinlaw watches interestedly.

But the freshmen were here, perhaps a little more serious, but as green as ever. And the college was gathering them to its fold as it began its one hundred and ninth school term.

Registration Day: Bob Gallimore, Johnny Walker, and Frank Kincheloe wait to give registrants Old Gold and Black cards; two new coeds, Willie Ruth Edwards and Iris Willis, decide on courses for semester; freshmen ask Professor West for help on schedule problems; freshman Daugherty and upperclassman Doc Harvey finish up, file out past clerks.

King and Walker preside over "rat court." Upperclassmen Beck, Aydlett, and Kinlaw look on with glee as Jack Baldwin administers paddle to rear of freshman.

Our Administration Stated Our War Policy

THURMAN D. KITCHIN
President

1912-43 brought to the men of Wait Hall's rotunda a new kind of work. No longer were their supervisory tasks limited to the governing of male students. They were now extended to include several score coeds and over one thousand men of the Army Finance School. In carrying out the latter, they cooperated with Lieutenant-Colonel Howarth and the other officers stationed here in making Army schedules and the traditional Wake Forest mode of life harmonize. To look after the coeds, they added to their number Miss Lois Johnson, the college's first Dean of Women, who immediately gained favor with her promise to the boys that the girls would "give them a run for their money."

The five stand-bys of the administration—President Kitchin, Dean Bryan, Dean Stansbury, Bursar Earnshaw, and Registrar Patterson—carried out their increased duties with customary efficiency. Dr. Kitchin worked many hours and traveled many miles in order to acquire for Wake Forest an ever-growing participation in the war effort, first through the establishment of the Finance Division, and second through the selection of Wake Forest as an army pre-medical center. Dr. Bryan took on the new assignment of deciphering releases from the Army and Navy and counseling reservists about what actions to take in the face of possible calls to active duty. Dr. Stansbury ably held together a constantly diminishing law school student body.

Mr. Earnshaw took over, in addition to his permanent responsibilities, the local Army's finance problems, which ranged from feeding over 1,000 men three times a day to buying almost unobtainable beds and mattresses for them. And Mr.

OVER in the Johnson Building, two of the busiest men in Wake Forest these days are Drs. Ora C. Bradbury and Elton C. Cocke, biologists par excellence. With the departure of Instructor Charles M. Allen for the photographic division of the AAF in early November, the task of instructing at least thirty-five per cent of the student body, in addition to planning for the prospective Army pre-medical program, was not one to be dawdled with. The lights in the Johnson Building burn many and late.

From his office in the north wing of Lea Laboratory the remaining stalwart of the chemistry department, ever-smiling Dr. W. J. Wyatt, also has a big hand in the training of future medicos. Although the other members of the chemical "Big Three," Drs. Black and Isbell, have long since begun their duties for Uncle Sam, the department, with the 1942 addition of Instructor John Freeman, is under full sail, leaving Dr. Wyatt plenty of time to haunt the dreams of his Organic students.

On the bottom row are the five "emancipated garret-dwellers," gentlemen of the English department who for some years now have occupied the Alumni Building, third floor back. But over the Christmas holidays they picked up their belongings and moved over to Wait Hall, where Dr. H. B. Jones directs activities from his desk over by the big pendulum clock. Dr. Folk, with pipe and pencil in hand, now uses the big English library table for threshing out knotty problems with publications men. At the other end of the table Professor Aycock, debate coach and art gallery curator, shakes with restrained mirth at Professor Max Griffin's joke, while a short distance away Professor Brown wades through unending stacks of freshman themes.

IF A POLL WERE TAKEN to determine the luckiest men on the faculty, the vote would undoubtedly go to the cigar devotees of the education department, Professor Memory and Dean Bryan, who probably have a higher percentage of coeds on their rolls than any other two men on the campus. By the same premise, Dr. C. B. Earp, professor of Greek, stands at the other end of the line. His row on row of ministerial students is seldom broken by a feminine face. Dr. Hubert Poteat, the Latin department, on the subject of coeds, merely takes a firmer grip on his pipe, clears his throat—and straightens his tie.

One of the most notable effects of the war on Wake Forest has been the strange sight of fourth-year English and philosophy majors laboring over problems in spherical trigonometry and calculus, much to the exasperation of the professors. The war has made us mindful of technical subjects, but in the process of grading papers Dr. H. A. Jones, along with colleagues Carroll, Raynor, and Gay, must sometimes wonder. Indicative of the demand for this type of work are the popular defense courses in mechanical drawing and surveying under the directorship of Professor Carroll with the able assistance of Tom Arrington.

Probably the stiffest academic dose in any department is the combined course of Physics 1 and 2, taught five mornings a week at 8:30 a.m., by Dr. Hermon Parker to bleary-eyed victims of a 7:45 alarm clock ring. Dr. Speas and Dr. Parker were also among the evacuees of the Alumni Building when the Army Finance School took it over last December. Where Dr. Speas once tutored his classes in the finer points of molecular activity and proved that the hand is quicker than the eye in sneaking a pinch of tobacco grains, the voices of shavetails now discuss the details of accounting.

TO THE MODERN language departments falls the distinction of being the first faculty group in 109 years of Wake Forest history to go "coed." Not one, but three ladies, were enlisted: Miss Nell Dowtin, teacher of Spanish, and Mrs. W. J. Wyatt, and Dean Lois Johnson, instructors in French. In fact, for a while it seemed dangerously close to becoming completely feminine when Dr. Parcell of the French department and Professor Paul Berry of the German department left for military duty, but Professor Robert M. Browning recuperated from the loss of colleague Berry, and with the backing of ping pong champion John Conley, a masculine flavor of the department was asserted.

The school year of 1912-13 found Dr. C. C. Pearson and the history department already out of the Social Science Building and busily engaged in their work in the austere atmosphere of the Law Building. The classes, meanwhile, were put on a split-second alternating schedule that fitted with cog-like perfection into the schedule of the Law School. The contact was so close that Professor Carlton P. West was suspected of letting occasional references to torts and contracts slip into his lectures, and Professor Clonts and Dr. Stroupe assumed more barrister-like attitudes. Even Dr. Rea, who stuck to his office on Publications Row and held morning, afternoon, and night conferences with most of the student body, sensed the change.

To a student who hesitated just a little too long over the answer to a question, Dr. Pearson admonished, "You can't travel on a freight train in this class, Mr. Davis!" Professor Clonts sent his medievalists scurrying to the library downstairs for the correct spelling and pronunciation of words like "Veii" and "suppositions." And Dr. Stroupe's History I sophomores for the first time in many a day refrained from crushing cigarette butts on the highly oiled floors, but placed them decorously in the ash trays on the ends of the table.

The most traveled group on the campus this year was not Coach D. C. Walker's Demon Deacon football squad, but Professor Thane McDonald's college octet. Under his direction the octet, the band, the glee club, and the little symphony have developed into integral parts of campus life.

Every Wake Forest man from sophomore enrollees in Psychology I to the members of the Philosophy seminar is sooner or later jarred by Dr. Albert C. Reid's intellectual thunderbolts, whether out of a 9:10 nap or into a new conception of pragmatism or materialism. To all who come to know him, Dr. Reid is a seeker of truth and foe of intellectual dishonesty.

Dr. O. T. Binkley and Dr. J. Allen Easley, keystone men of the religion department, have a definite job to do for Uncle Sam: that of turning out chaplains for the fighting forces, as well as furnishing morale builders at home. Hard-luck men of the faculty are Messrs. Walker, Utley, and Greason, who have transferred from the warm, cozy confines of Gore Gymnasium to the windy spaces of Gore Field with 'nary a roof over their heads. Instead of the usual "1-2-up-down" of calisthenics, Coach Phil now drills his gym classes to the "Hut-two-three-four" of the army sergeants.

The Wake Forest Law School of 1912-13 might well be called a "Remembrance of Things Past." Enrollment and faculty, like those of law schools all over the nation, have plummeted downward until only a fragment of the whole remains. At present, Professors Lake and Timberlake, along with Dean Stansbury, comprise the faculty. Dr. N. Y. Gulley was called back from retirement at the first of the year and served for a short while.

The Reverend Eugene Olive, Dr. C. L. Mackie, and Mr. W. D. Holliday are three guardian spirits of the student body, being respectively the chaplain, the physician, and the building and grounds inspector.

Mrs. R. S. Pritchard, Miss Georgia Godfrey, Miss Winifred Royall.

Mrs. A. P. Shearon, Mrs. E. B. Earnshaw, Mrs. E. C. Cocke.

IN THE QUARTET of offices flanking the rotunda inside Wait Hall work the six ladies who form the spokes in the wheel of administration and who keep the records of our college careers. Reading from left to right they are: Mrs. Pritchard, secretary to the President; Miss Godfrey, secretary to the Dean; Miss Royall and Mrs. Shearon, assistants to the Registrar; and Mrs. Earnshaw and Mrs. Cocke, bookkeepers for the Bursar.

Through their capable hands pulses the life stream of Wake Forest—the enrollment, the payments, the grades, the official withdrawals, and the applications for degrees. Theirs are the hands that swing the pendulum of our academic lives.

Down in the infirmary, the quiet dignity of Miss Eva Vause's daily routine has been disrupted by the rapid-fire wisecracking of an Army sergeant. In addition to their duties of keeping the students shipshape, Miss Vause and Miss Jackson, with the help of the sergeant, have had to assume the job of chasing the colds and fevers of the Finanee men.

The biggest influence in the everyday life of any student is the college library. In addition to the ever-present term papers and parallel reports, there is in the library an opportunity for enjoyable reading and short, low-toned conversations. To Mrs. Ethel Crittenden, college librarian, is due much credit for the way in which she has carried on and expanded the library, even though hampered by constant changes in personnel as NYA helpers dropped out, and by the loss of Miss Hannah Holding, long-time assistant librarian. Mrs. Crittenden is ably backed up by Miss Ellen Ewing, Mrs. Nancy Harris, and Mrs. Kent Barbee, who replaced Miss Holding.

In contrast to the heavy traffic in the general library, the law library is a quiet and unfrequented place, so quiet that the librarian, the former Miss Valeria Fuller, took time out this year to become Mrs. Owensby.

Miss Eva Vause, Miss Marjorie Jackson.

IN MEMORIAM

Dr. J. Hendren Gorrell

B.A., Washington and Lee University, 1888; M.A., ibid., 1890; Instructor in English and Modern Languages, ibid., 1890-91; Ph.D., Johns Hopkins University, 1894; Professor of Modern Languages, Wake Forest College, 1894-1939; Professor Emeritus, ibid., 1939-1942; Died, March 28, 1942.

James Wilford Mattern

Born, March 8, 1923; Graduated, Mt. Hermon High School, Mt. Hermon, Mass., 1941; Student, Wake Forest College, 1941-1942; Died, July 2, 1942.

We the Students prepared for our part in the World's future

ACCORDING to Registrar Grady Patterson's official figures, 827 students were on hand in September to begin Wake Forest's school year 1942-43. Five hundred of us were upperclassmen with one year or more of Deacontown life to our credit; 207 of us were freshmen, tasting for the first time of the colorful atmosphere of the campus; and 120 of us were transfers from Mars Hill, Campbell, Wingate, and various other institutions of learning.

Craig, Starford, Copley, McLean, and Lanier pause between classes for hull outside Book Store.

M. G. Caudle, Rough Cox, Boots Shoe, and E. B. Konegay bolster morale in the parlor of the Powell House.

Wake Forest swing shift: Three ministerial students lounge lazily outside rooming quarters.

An effect of feminine charm at Wake Forest: Misses Batts, Vick, and Bryan enchant willing Bill Phillips in chat on campus green.

Football players work prodigiously at their favorite course.

We were some eight-hundred strong this year, bolstered by co-eds

By the start of the second semester the war had narrowed our ever-shrinking number to 565. In February students in the Army Air Corps Reserve were called to active duty. And just as THE HOWLER was going to press, the Enlisted Reserve Corps boys received their orders to appear for formal induction.

Those of us who were able to withstand temporarily the threats of Uncle Sam's many tentacles discovered that under war conditions indifference to work did not pay. We enrolled in courses like military math and surveying and physics to prepare for the service. And we continued our English and history and religion courses to make ourselves better equipped for an active part in the construction of a post-war world.

The Senior Class elected its twelve outstanding members

OUT OF THE SCRAMBLE of returns from the 1943 HOWLER poll to determine the twelve outstanding seniors, these dozen men emerged. Their names were listed the most times on individual ballots submitted by members of the class. The nominations included a huge majority of the class itself, a liberal sprinkling of juniors, and not a few sophomores. The vote was heavy; the count was close. Here are the men chosen, a fair sample of the best in scholarship, personality, and ability of the class of 1943.

Striking commentary on the comparative selective choice of honorary societies lies in the fact that six of this group belong to Phi Beta Kappa, ten to Omicron Delta Kappa, and all are listed in Who's Billy Joe Patton, Beth Perry, Billy Primm.

Pat Preston, Neil Morgan, John Conley.

Johnny Walker, Ed Wilson, Herbert Thompson.

Rowland Pruette, John McMillan, Frank Kincheloe.

Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

Also significant is the fact that without exception, the students herein chosen made outstanding contributions to at least one major extra-curricular activity, more concrete evidence of their versatility and well-balanced collegiate careers.

Publications is the largest single field here represented, with four college editors being selected. Three of those chosen were active in student council work, among them being the president of the student body. Also affiliated with this group was the head of the freshman advisory council.

Religion is represented by the immediate past president of the North Carolina Baptist Student Union, athletics by the captain of the football team, and dramatics by the director of the Wake Forest Little Theater, Beth Perry, who became the first girl ever to be elected to the list of a Wake Forest senior class's twelve outstanding members.

the Student Body of Wake Forest College

WE—SENIORS, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen—were the student body of Wake Forest College. In 1942-43, as in years past, we carried out the work expected of us. We looked in our ranks for leaders and elected them to govern us by the honor system. We went to classes, studied and read, and in most cases passed our courses. We took part in football and basketball, drilled and exercised, and developed our bodies to wartime standards. We attended church and showed interest in the varied activities of the Baptist Student Union. We participated in extra-curricular work: in literary societies, in the debate squad, in musical groups, in the weekly, monthly, and yearly publications, and in the newly formed dramatics club. We enjoyed week ends of dancing and dating and good times.

1942-43 saw us spending a year of work and play together, all striving for the same goals of achievement and good fellowship.

We Campaigned and Politicked and Cast our Votes

TWICE a year oily-tongued politicians put on their most fetching manners and go out, loaded with cigars and smiles, to entice the votes of their trusting classmates. The occasions are the fall elections held by the frat-men and the spring elections of the student body.

Most of the successful politicking this year was done by the whips of the fraternity caucus, the non-fraternity Student Political Union being inactive.

Breadline, Deacon style: Students file into voting center to cast ballots.

Winners in student body elections in the spring of 1942 were the above happy people: Paul Baker, secretary-treasurer of the student body; Oscar King, vice president; and Billy Joe Patton, president.

Crisp, Williams, and Currin congratulate each other on victories in mid-year contests.

STUDENT COUNCIL

HIGH TRIBUNAL of justice, virtual campus bureau of investigation, medium of communication between faculty and students, high pressure sales-men, supervisors of campus elections, and backers of worthy causes—take these ingredients, stir until firm, add three hours of each Wednesday night in the year, and concentrated before you is the 1942-43 edition of the Wake Forest College Student Council.

Led by Student Body President Billy Joe Patton this year's Council did all these things and endeavored to keep the machinery of a war-time student body clicking under adverse circumstances. They met on Wednesday nights and heard offenses of students and passed judgment on them; they worked with the faculty in seeing that college rules were enforced; they completed with a swift, final sweep the unfinished bond drive willed to them by last year's Council; they sponsored cigarette drives to send smokes to boys overseas; and they held the polls during elections, and counted the votes afterwards.

STUDENT LEGISLATURE

EVERY PARENT has a problem child. Wake Forest's is that august body of seven men, more commonly known as the Student Legislature. It has been abused, and beaten, and kicked around like a red-headed, impudent step child. Still, in the spring when the young man's fancy is lightly turning and the cigar smoke of spring elections wafts through the air, enough men manage to turn out on election day to fight for a seat on it.

No one seems to know what the Student Legislature is supposed to do; no one seems to care what the Student Legislature does. Yet because it does nothing during the year but meet to have its picture taken for the yearbook, it is abused, and scoffed at, and kicked around. Its big brother, the Student Council, impatiently threatened to banish it last year if it did not promise to perk up and do something. It promised, was revised, and not banished. Candidates ran for office. Candidates were elected to office. But last year's promise was accidentally overlooked and nothing was done this year in the mad scramble to keep in step with the college's war-time program. And still it continues to be sneered at, and reprimanded, and will, in all probability, continue to be a political plum for office seekers in spring elections.

We Studied and We Learned

Freshman J. A. West, pajama-clad, studies tomorrow's assignment in the quiet of his room.

Dr. Bill Speas draws out the answer to a question about the physics experiment his class is running.

The bane of every freshman: a class in English 1. The teacher is Prof. Max Griffin. The topic of the lecture: Theme 10.

ALTHOUGH the crowds of cinemaddicts which frequent Mr. Bill Glover's Forest Theatre seven nights of the week and the swarms of similarly nonchalant young college gentlemen who catch 1:45 a.m. and 3:30 a.m. north-bound buses from the capital city of Raleigh on Sunday mornings might be good arguments to the contrary, the larger part of Wake Forest students come to school primarily to study and to learn.

We attend from fifteen to twenty hours of classes a week, spend hours more on homework in our rooms and in the college library, and in general try to keep well-informed on progress being made in our fields of study. As freshmen, we struggle through bibliographies and send fatigued library assistants running to and fro in the stacks in search of term paper material. As sophomores, we probe into the mysteries of the test tube and the microscope and are amazed at the results. As juniors, we learn that "mind is the sum-total of an individual's state of consciousness as experienced during his lifetime." As seniors, we finally find time to escape from the confines of prescribed courses and branch out into electives like Roman Civilization and Marriage and the Family.

For those of us who excelled in scholastics, there were awaiting memberships in one or more of the campus's honorary fraternities.

An every day scene in the college library: Weary students pore over tomorrow's class assignments or today's newspapers in the South reading room. On the far right is a grim reminder of the war year: a picture of a wounded soldier, with the caption, "Buy War Bonds."

A class in military math: Fessor Carroll applies principles to actual problems and solves a stickler in spherical trig.

Dr. Folk shows his copy-reading class how to go about making up a newspaper. Acting as editor for the day is Ken "Mole" Nelson.

GAMMA NU IOTA

GAMMA NU IOTA is an honorary pre-medical fraternity, established here in 1937 to stimulate greater interest in the medical field. This year its bi-monthly meetings were presided over by Booker Dillard, first semester president, and Durward Reed, second semester. At various times, guest speakers were invited to give lectures, and early in May a fraternity picnic was held.

Members in 1912-13 were: Allison Alderman, Paul Baker, Tom Burnett, Bill Byrd, Helen Campfield, Joe Christian, Roy Collins, Bill Craig, J. M. Davis, Harry Dickie, Booker Dillard, Alton Fales, Jack Fowler, Clifford Gaddy, Roy Glass, Dick Glenn, Frank Green, Tommy Griffin, Marina Hawkins, Bill Hinson, Ferris Hoggard, Sid Johnson, Paul Kearns, Frank Kincheloe, Carlyle Kinlaw, Claude McClure, Dave Marshall, Graham Pittman, Bill Price, Durward Reed, Wesley Richardson, Richard Saleeby, Maryin Seife, M. J. Sylvester, Rex Tillotson, Gordon Townsend, John Williams, Kenneth Williford, and Ralph Young.

GAMMA SIGMA EPSILON

THE LOCAL CHAPTER of Gamma Sigma Epsilon, chemical fraternity, was installed in 1926. Membership in the group is based upon "character, interest in chemistry, and scholarship" and is limited to juniors and seniors.

The fraternity meets every other Tuesday night. Grand Alchemist this year was Robert Nowell, who was also voted the most valuable member of the chapter and given honorary membership in the American Chemical Society for one year. W. J. Douglass and Edward Cheek were recorder and visor, respectively.

PHI DELTA OMEGA

PHI DELTA OMEGA is a pre-law fraternity, founded here in 1910 by Weston Hatfield, Jack Starnes, and Ben Cole. During 1911-12, it almost died, but this year it returned to life, and under the presidency of "Buster" Currin, sponsored several original programs. Highlights of the year were two sensational moot court trials, the last one being an "alienation of affections" case in which Miss Beth Perry was the plaintiff and Miss "Boots" Shoe the defendant. Buster Currin served as attorney for the defense, Rudd Friday was pro-secutor, and Wade Yates acted as judge.

SIGMA PI ALPHA

SIGMA PI ALPHA is an honorary modern language fraternity. Installed at Wake Forest in 1931, the organization has as goals for its members: greater interest in the affairs of foreign nations and better understanding between other countries and ours. This year the presidency of the fraternity was in the hands of Johnny Walker, who was succeeded at the beginning of the second semester by Bill West. One special meeting during the spring featured Prof. Ballenger of State College as guest speaker.

Members in 1942-43 were: Arthur Adams, Bill Bland, Dwight Brown, Murl Bumgarner, John Conley, Margaret Cooper, James Crisp, Harry Daniels, J. M. Davis, Dick Glenn, Ladd Hamrick, Walter Harris, S. G. Hasty, Bill Hinson, Ed Hobbgood, Bill Holloman, Elizabeth Jones, Myron Kochee, Russell Kornegay, John McMillan, Clarence Martin, Mary Paschal, Bill Phillips, Graham Pittman, Rowland Pruette, J. T. INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS CLUB

of the International Relations Club's year

was the Southeastern District Convention, held in Raleigh in March. Larry Williams being district president, Wake Forest and Meredith were joint hosts for the series of meetings, which created statewide interest through the appearance of Senator Elbert Thomas of Utah and Dr. Clyde Eagleton of New York University. At home, C. C. Hope and Larry Williams guided the club to one of its most progressive seasons.

Members were: J. W. Allen, Lois Bradley, Walter Carpenter, Mary Grace Caudle, Royce Chesser, Warren Coble, Gene Cole, W. J. Douglass, Willie Ruth Edwards, Sandy Ellis, John Farrar, Robert Forbes, Rudd Friday, Burnette Harvey, Lawrence Highfill, Owen Hipps, Ed Hobgood, C. C. PHI BETA KAPPA

THE ULTIMATE REWARD for those who excel in the field of scholastics is membership in Phi Beta Kappa. The local chapter, Delta of North Carolina, was established

January 13, 1941, and since then has held four elections. 1942-43 was the first school term in which it has been necessary to meet twice for taking in new men. The extra election was held in December in order to pass on students who were graduating at the mid-year commencement exercises in January.

In addition to the seventeen students tapped this year, there are thirteen faculty members in Phi Beta Kappa: Dr. Olin T. Binkley, Prof. Dalma A. Brown, Dr. Cronje B. Earp, Dr. Edgar E. Folk, Dr. Henry Broadus Jones, Dr. Thurman D. Kitchin, Dr. Hermon M. Parker, Dr. George W. Paschal, Dr. Charles C. Pearson, Dr. Hubert M. Poteat, Dr. Albert C. Reid, Dr. Henry S. Stroupe, and Prof. Carlton P. West. Two alumni, Dr. Rosser Taylor of Furman University and Dr. George Medlin of the University of Richmond, were initiated with the group taken in in March.

WE PLAYED AND HAD FUN

PHYSICAL education classes came tumbling out of Gore Gymnasium in December, turning over their locker rooms and showers and courts to the barracks-hungry financiers. Down the steps and into the outdoors they went, and finally they settled on Gore Field, where Coach Phil Utley conducted his classes for the remainder of the year.

In the meantime, the basketball squad moved to the local High School gymnasium for practice and to the courts of other colleges for contests. Two "home" games were played in Raleigh's Memorial Auditorium.

Spring sports suffered the most serious blow.

He-men Perry, Jones, and Squires gather around shapely friends at local swimming pool.

Neither baseball, track, tennis, nor golf was scheduled, and except for several diamond encounters with "B" teams and freshman nines of other schools, there was no intercollegiate competition in these sports.

We—the students in general—were most active athletically at the ping pong table in Student Center, where paddle-drunk enthusiasts kept up a constant vigil all through the days and nights. Fraternity men took part in intramural football, basketball, and softball, and all of us made occasional trips to the tennis courts and to the golf links for physical workout and recreation.

SOME OF US EXCELLED IN FOOTBALL

THE 1942 football season will go down in Wake Forest history. Not only did the team finish its season with one of the best records in years and a second place in the Southern Conference standings, but it accomplished what alumni and supporters had for years been waiting for in vain—victories over Duke and Clemson.

The Deacons broke their first jinx in Groves Stadium on October 3 at the expense of the Blue Devils from Duke, and they lost little time in and Johnny Perry again swung wide on a reverse to score. A few minutes later, end Burnie Capps blocked Storer's kick at midfield, picked up the ball and ran to the two-yard line, from which point Russ Perry bucked over for the touchdown.

Only in the final minutes of the game did Duke recover a fumble on Wake's three-yard line and push across a touchdown. It was fullback Leo Long who plunged over for the score.

Four weeks later on the same field the Deacons doing it. Midway in the first quarter, Johnny Perry, Deacon halfback, broke away on a reverse for 49 yards and the first touchdown. "Buck" Jones, Captain Pat Preston, and Tony Rubino supplied the blocks which enabled the fleet-footed Perry to score.

In the second quarter the big Deacon line came in for its share of the glory. Captain Preston broke through to block a Duke punt, and Jones recovered on the Duke 35-yard line. Cochran drove to the seven on an off-tackle play, broke another jinx by defeating Clemson. Despite a long trip to Boston the week before, the Deacs managed to come from behind and score a 19-6 victory. The Tigers had taken a 6-0 lead in the first quarter, mainly on the passes of Butler, but J. V. Pruitt tied up the game before halftime with a 12-yard touchdown sprint, and the Deacon fans breathed a little more freely. Russ Perry climaxed a 50-yard drive with a touchdown in the third quarter to put the Deacs ahead, and John Cochran clinched a victory in the final stanza with a 53-yard punt return for a touchdown.

These two victories over Duke and Clemson more than made up for the team's two losses to North Carolina and Boston College. Opening the season against the Tar Heels in Kenan Stadium at Chapel Hill, the Deacons came on the field amid a downpour of rain. And it continued to rain throughout the game. The only score came when Johnny Perry fumbled the wet ball trying to return a punt, and Carolina recovered on Wake's 18-yard line. The Tar Heels then drove to the Deacons' seven-yard line, where Cox swung around end for the touchdown which gave Carolina victory. At that, the Deacs gained 99 yards rushing to the Tar Heels' 91, John Cochran picking up 68 of those yards in 13 rushes.

After this loss the Demon Deacon came back with their great victory over Duke, then conquered Furman 14-6, and were held to a scoreless tie by N. C. State. Against the Purple Hurricane of Furman it was sophomore Bo Sacrinty who provided the scoring punch. He caught two long passes from Cochran for touchdowns and kicked both extra points to account for the entire Deacon scoring. The Wolfpack from N. C. State threw back the Deacs' only scoring chance on the four-yard line to hold Coach Walker's boys to a tie.

Powerful Boston College was next for the Deacons, the contest being played in Boston. The Deacs made a ball game of it until superior reserve strength proved too much in the final quarter. The Eagles scored in the first quarter when Holovak shook loose for thirty yards, then bucked over for the score. But most of the remaining part of the first half was played in Eagle territory, with the Deacons driving inside the Boston College 20-yard line four times only to be turned back. Eagle reserves insured BC a victory in the final stanza, scoring two touchdowns to follow up a third-period score.

John Cochran won the admiration and praise of Boston fans and sports scribes by his performance in this game. Cochran's kicking, running, and passing caused Carl Brumbaugh, BC backfield coach, to remark, "Cochran is the best back we've faced this year."

Virginia Military Institute, George Washington, and South Carolina fell before the Deacons in the final games of the season. The Deacs scored 23 points against the Cadets and then let the reserves finish the game. The Colonials fell 20-0, and John Cochran wound up the season with a brilliant performance against South Carolina, scoring four touchdowns on runs of 54, 42, 31, and 57 yards.

That the Deacons had a top-flight football team is shown by the fact that John Cochran and Captain Pat Preston were selected on the All-Southern team, Buck Jones, Jim Copley, Johnny Perry, and Tony Rubino receiving honorable mention. And at the annual football banquet held in early December, head coach Douglas Clyde Walker stated, "I've never coached a finer bunch of boys who possessed such spirit and such a desire to win."

While the 1942 football team made history with touch-downs and flashy line plays, other Wake Forest students kept alive the spirit of the stands. Cheer leaders, led by Kemp Reece, shouted and yelled and waved their megaphones frantically to bring out the fervor of the crowds. Bandmen marched and sounded their instruments in martial, fighting tunes and in traditional school songs like "Here's to Wake Forest" and "Dear Old Wake Forest." And responding to the occasion, the entire student body broke out in applause and in excited enthusiasm for the greatest of all college sports.

SOME OF US EXCELLED IN BASKETBALL

WHEN BASKETBALL season opened, prospects for a successful season for the Demon Deacons were bright. Captain Everett Berger and Ray Koteski were returning from the 1942 starting five, along with Joe Hinerman, an experienced reserve, and Carlton Mitchell, who was ineligible last year but who was well acquainted with the Deacons' style of play. Only one position remained open on the starting team scheduled away from home. Thus, playing an abbreviated schedule of thirteen contests, Wake Forest finished the season with but one victory in eleven conference games and two losses in non-conference tilts.

Yet among these losses were close games which, perhaps with a few breaks, the Deacons might have won. The biggest heartbreaker which the Deacs lost was the second game with North and Tom Burnett, an untried sophomore, soon showed the ability and hustle to win that spot.

However, misfortune struck the Deacons in December and struck hard. The Army Finance School took over Gore Gymnasium, and Coach Murray Greason and his court squad had three fouls on them before the season ever started. First, the Deacons were forced to hold their daily practices in the small high school gymnasium, and, since the gym was too small to accommodate a large crowd, all games had to be Carolina, played on the Duke court as the first game of the Big Five double-header. Behind all the way after the first few minutes, the Deacs took the lead with less than a minute to play on a follow-up shot by Joe Hinerman. While they were attempting to freeze the ball, however, Jim White, Tar Heel center, stole the ball, dribbled half the length of the court, and laid in a two-pointer with five seconds of play remaining, to give Carolina a 32-31 victory.

another tough one. Playing The Citadel in the afternoon, the Deacs led all the way until the final minute of play, only to see Pierce, Cadet forward, sink a couple of shots which meant a 38-36 win for the Cadets. Because of a mix-up in schedules the two teams met again that night, and the weary Deacons lost by a 52-39 count. And against N. C. State, in their first meeting, the Demon Deacons fought back to take the lead near the end of the game on a goal by Mitchell, but this time State's Katkevick got hot with three shots and the Deacons came out on the short end of a 42-37 score.

The Deacons had to open their season this year against North Carolina on January 9 with only two weeks' practice. Despite Mitchell's eighteen points, the White Bantams, who had already played five contests, had little trouble and won, 49-37. The following week saw the Deacon squad in South Carolina, where they met the University of South Carolina and Clemson. The Gamecocks easily defeated Wake, 43-24, but the next night the Deacons were on and trounced the Clemson Tigers, 71-56, as Mitchell chalked up twenty-two points, Berger sixteen, and Hinerman fourteen.

Superior reserve strength proved too much for the Deacons against the Blue Devils of Duke in two contests. The Dukes won the first, 61-40, and followed that up two weeks later with a 59-40 win. The final two games on the Wake Forest schedule were played on the Memorial Auditorium court in Raleigh. Fortune remained against the Deacons as the Gamecocks of South Carolina took a close 39-35 contest and N. C. State took a 52-36 decision.

Though Wake Forest had a poor season, the Deacons were a much better ball club than the record indicates. Berger, Mitchell, Kote-ki, Hinerman, and Burnett played good basketball throughout the season, and the reserves, headed by Jack Gentry, Bill Dougherty, Dom Flammia, "Cotton" Morris, "Bunk" Jones, and Archie Nesbit, offered valuable and welcome relief to the first stringers.

SOME OF US EXCELLED IN BASEBALL

FACED with the loss of such veterans as Captain Dick Hoyle, Fred Eason, Tony Gallovich, George Edwards, Ray Everly and Carl Ray from the 1911 team, Coach Murray Greason molded together the few lettermen left, some reserves and four sophomores into a winning combination, one which, after a slow start, wound up with a record of seven wins and three losses in collegiate competition.

Though his infield, with Bob Reid at first, Billy Primm at second, John Fletcher at short, and Pete Horebak at the third base spot, was made up of veterans, Coach Greason had to depend upon three sophomores to hold down the outfield positions, and the three performed brilliantly. John Cochran in centerfield led the team in batting with a .392 average. Right-fielder Clyde Whitener proved his worth at the plate, being the runs-batted-in leader, and Charlie Cole earned his position with his long distance hitting.

Arthur "Lefty" Vivian, completely recovered from a sore arm, filled the number one spot on the Deacons' pitching staff, ending up with three victories and one loss, two of his wins being over the Duke Blue Devils. Sophomores Jake Pearce and Charlie Ripple more than earned their letters, the former turning in three victories and the latter two. Both had one defeat marked against them. Veteran hurler Jesse Tharnish again ran into hard luck, but proved a dependable relief pitcher.

John Conley and Harold Hawkins divided the catching duties along with Ralph Hampton, John Smidt. "Cotton" Morris, Bill Starnes, "Chuck" Fineberg, Dom Flammia, and Russ Abbitt were on hand for reserves at various positions.

After the Deacons had pounded out sixteen hits, including two triples, a double and single by John Cochran, for a 11-1 win over Cornell, and behind the steady hurling of Jake Pearce had whipped State, 5-4. Coach Greason sent his squad against three professional teams, hoping that the experience would prove useful later on. Elmira and Hartford, both members of the Eastern League (Class A baseball) licked the Deacons, and Burlington outsluged Coach Murray's boys 13-11. But after the latter game, the Deacs proceeded to win five out of their last six games and to wind up in second place in the Big Five standings.

Charlie Cole's hitting, together with the pitching of Vivian, enabled the Deacs to whip Duke 8-7 and avenge an earlier defeat. Charlie Ripple turned in a three-hit performance to beat State 7-0. Pearce held the Tar Heels of Carolina in check while Bob Reid smashed a 400-foot triple in the ninth inning to drive in the winning run and a 4-2 win. With the Big Five title at stake a week later, however, the Deacons muffed three scoring chances and kicked in three unearned runs to suffer a 5-4 defeat at the hands of the Tar Heels. Two days later Vivian notched his second triumph over Duke and in the last game of the season, Johnny Fletcher ended his collegiate career with four hits, including two triples, as the Deacons turned in a 17-8 victory over State.

KAPPA SIGMA, with a record of six wins and one defeat, won the fraternity touch football championship after a close race with Pi Kappa Alpha and Lambda Chi Alpha. The Pi KA's handed the Kappa Sigs their lone setback, but they in turn lost to Kappa Alpha and Lambda Chi.

Conley, DeLoach, Nye, McIntyre, Stone, Primm, Green, Tobey, Trivette, and Berger were chosen for the All-Campus team.

The fraternity basketball race ended in a tie, and in the play-off game, Alpha Kappa Pi took a one-point victory from Kappa Alpha in an overtime contest. The Pi KA's ended up in third place, while SPE and Kappa Sig tied for fourth.

MONOGRAM CLUB WHEN MEMBERS of the Monogram Club returned to school in September, they found that their clubroom in Student Center had become a part of the enlarged College Book Store. No longer having a place in which to meet, the club was not very active during the year. In the spring twenty new men were initiated into the group: Elmer Barbour, Bill Behm, Jeff Brogdon, Tom Burnett, Jim Camp, Harry Clark, John Conley, Buster Currin, Bill Dougherty, Dom Flammia, Jack Gentry, Don Hippi, Carlton Mitchell, Cotton Morris, Al Nemetz, Jerry Novick, Russ Perry, Ed Royston, Otis Sacrinty, and Don Wells. After initiation the new members were guests at the club's annual picnic.

President of the club until his departure for the Army in April was Billy Primm, who was succeeded by Everett Berger, basketball captain.

WE WORSHIPED

in an Environment that was Spiritual

QUICKENED by the war to a fresh sense of the vital part of religion in life, students this year have felt the need for constant harmonizing of their lives with the spirit of God—be it in the classroom lectures, in group discussions, in the church worship service, in the peaceful, worshipful atmosphere of the vesper service, or in private meditation and prayer. For us who face a world fraught with hard, cruel, bloody war and our inevitable part in it, religion has become more than ever a deep-seated part of our being, and a greater seriousness in matters of religion has evidenced itself clearly this year. In the campus-wide group discussions, in the religious emphasis week during the spring, and in the regular religious program from week to week, we have worshipped the God of our creation, and in this worship have derived new strength and enthusiasm to face the uncertain future. Guided by consecrated college and church leadership, we have found at Wake Forest a place where we may let our religious insights grow without the hindrance of narrow dogmatism, prejudice, and intolerant bigotry.

Some of us became prominent in Religious Activities

BAPTIST STUDENT UNION

EVERY Sunday night after the evening church service the sixteen members of the Baptist Student Union Council meet to examine the activity of the religious program during the previous week and to map out plans for the near and distant future. Meeting with their chaplain adviser, Mr. Eugene Olive, and presided over by Harold Townsend, the members of the council seek to find better ways to promote the cause of Christian living on the campus. Reports are made, discussions arise, and sober thinking and conscientious planning are the order of the day.

The Council represents the nerve center of the whole student religious program for the college.

The members of the Council are representatives from the various unit organizations and they serve in an executive capacity. Through the efforts of this small body numerous accomplishments have been made during the year, notable among them being the establishment of the campus-wide discussion groups—with fraternity and faculty cooperation—the furnishing of Bibles for infirmary inmates, work projects in the town Negro community, and a maintenance of active unit organizations in the face of decreasing student enrollment. Representatives to the Council come from various walks of student life and hold positions of leadership in many extra-curricular activities.

BAPTIST TRAINING UNION

THE BAPTIST Training Union is the general name embracing the five unit organizations which meet on Sunday night before the evening worship service. Dedicated to the goal of education in and preparation for Christian living, the four unions and the forum feature programs on a wide variety of religion-related subjects. The unions—Cullom, Howard, Poteat and Reid by name—follow the general outline set forth in the training union quarterlies, while the Taylor forum is purely a student-planned and student-led discussion group.

Before a convocation of the four unions Professor Clonts spoke on "Baptist Beliefs," and frequent joint programs have been held from time to time. Although well-nigh extinct during the first semester, the forum picked up interest and members with the turn of the year, and under the chairmanship of Doug Elam the forum members have discussed such topics as: "Must We Hate?" "Christian Principles in the Post-War World," and "Race Discrimination."

SUNDAY SCHOOL OFFICERS

ONE OF THE BACKBONES of institutional Christianity is the Sunday school department, and the college department here is composed of four classes taught by the following faculty men: Dr. D. B. Bryan, Professor J. C. Carroll, Dr. T. D. Kitchin, and Dr. A. C. Reid. Although these classes are attended by only a small percentage of the student body, they afford a quiet and profitable period of Bible study and meditation for faithful attenders. With the entrance of soldiers into the community, the doors of the Sunday school classes have been opened to the men in khaki, and a number of them are to be found in the classes from Sunday to Sunday.

Breaking the routine and at the same time creating new interest, the classes have given socials for the regular members and prospective newcomers. Then socials, taking form either in weiner roasts by the lake or scavenger hunts, have helped to stimulate fellowship among the personnel of the classes.

THE 90-ODD MINISTERIAL students enrolled at Wake Forest this year get together once a week for meetings which feature talks by leading ministers in the state and in the South. Presided over by Fred Lipe and James Rowles during the first and second semester, respectively, the conference has had chaplains, college and seminary presidents, and prominent ministers to address its members. The Prophets' Frolic in April was the social highlight for the ministerial students.

Meeting every other Sunday afternoon, about twenty students composing the Christian Service Group assemble for programs and for projects among the Negroes and the poor. Practical and down to earth, this organization stresses humanitarianism over verbal eloquence in the pulpit.

to Honorary Fraternity*

DELTA KAPPA ALPHA

THE HONORARY ministerial fraternity was hit hard by the graduation last year of all but two members, and the organization plugged along rather slowly and inactively first semester with its membership composed only of President Fred Lipe and James Crisp, holder of all other positions. Lipe transferred to Duke early in the first term, and the president's chair fell vacant to Crisp. Early in the second semester several of the faculty aided Crisp in choosing for the organization nine members of highest scholastic standing among ministerial students in the junior and senior classes. Bob Lasater was elected by the new members to succeed Crisp as president.

Only two members of the enrolled ten—Bob Lasater and Lawrence Highfill—have been at Wake Forest four full years, the others having transferred from junior colleges.

Since its establishment on the Wake Forest campus in 1932, Delta Kappa Alpha has come to be recognized as a crowning achievement for students preparing for the ministry. The purpose of DKA has been "the furthering of fellowship and spiritual life and the providing of the opportunity to study together for mutual benefit."

Holding meetings several times during the past semester, DKA members discussed and endeavored to thrash out problems confronting ministers and ministerial students of today. An occasional guest speaker addressed members on topics of interest.

Although progress of the organization was impeded this year by not having a full membership, Delta Kappa Alpha kept up standards to continue as a worthy goal for ambitious students of the ministry.

We were Speakers, Upholding Wake Forest's Oldest Tradition

LONG BEFORE we played football, edited publications, acted, or sang—in fact, almost before we studied, we of Wake Forest talked. The college was still a bawling child and the first Administration Building was still unoccupied when two handfuls of students met and gave birth to two literary societies, the Philomathesian and the Euzelian.

Leo Hawkins, Phi speaker, waxes eloquent in an oration which won him first place in the Founders' Day oration contests.

John McMillan and Martha Ann Allen, top Founders' Day debaters, watch opponent's speech for slip-ups.

In the years since 1835 mere talking has expanded to include all sorts of speech-making—debate, oratory, extempore, impromptu. From the literary societies, which still serve as oratorical arenas where dress rehearsals for combat are held, has sprung the Wake Forest debate squad, known nationwide for its impressive string of victories in intercollegiate contests.

PHIOMATHESIAN LITERARY SOCIETY

THE PHIOMATHESIAN Literary Society, under President Sam Behrends, began its one hundred and eighth year of speech work in the fall with its annual smoker for freshmen and transfers, which featured a talk by former member Dr. Edgar E. Folk and which was accompanied by the usual cigars and refreshments. On Society Day the Phi's, championed by Tut Myers and Charlie Hostetler, won the debate contest. On Founders' Day they won both oration and debate, Leo Hawkins being voted best orator and John McMillan and Martha Ann Allen coming out on top as debaters.

Bill Poe was elected to the presidency for the second semester, but was drafted out of school. Norman Farnum, who succeeded him, was called up in the Air Corps Reserve swoop in February, and Leo Hawkins was named president for the rest of the school year. Under Hawkins, the Society tried several innovations to make for more interesting programs, the out-standing among them being an "Information, Please" quiz conducted by master of ceremonies Thane McDonald and starring Professors Folk, Poteat, Speas, and Stroupe.

The second semester, with Lawrence Highfill as presiding officer, was highlighted by Dr. Poteat's reading and interpretation of Marc Connelly's Green Pastures. In early May the Eu's held the annual Intra-Society Contest and awarded medals to the best debater, the best orator in each of the three top classes, and the

Leading Debaters won Special Recognition

PI KAPPA DELTA

PI KAPPA DELTA, forensic fraternity, is the oldest existing honorary group on the campus. Climax of its debate activities in 1942-43 was the squad's participation in April in the Grand Eastern Tournament of Winthrop College, combined with the Pi Kappa Delta Southern Province Tournament. Here Wake Forest men won seven out of thirteen events in the Grand Eastern, including first places in oratory, poetry reading, address reading, problem solving, after-dinner speaking, radio news-casting, and radio interviewing, and two out of four contests in the Pi Kappa Delta Tournament, first places in debate and in after-dinner. For the first time in college history, a coed, Martha Ann Allen, took the trip as a member of the squad.

At the North Carolina Student Legislature held in Raleigh in the fall, Larry Williams was elected speaker of the House and Sam Behrends, president pro tem of the Senate. Other squad members took part in discussions on the floor.

*We Were Musical;

instruments*

MUSIC in 1942-43 was a more vital part of the lives of the students of Wake Forest than it had ever been before. Through the labors and innovations of Prof. Thane McDonald, we became more aware of the beauties and the values of good music and were led to a higher music appreciation.

Music assistant Ernest Nott places needle on wax to hear one of the department's many records in the recently acquired Carnegie Set.

Thane McDonald, arm uplifted, directs the glee club in a pre-concert rehearsal.

Every means at the department's disposal was employed to bring music within the reach and understanding of each man in the student body; special concerts by the organized vocal and instrumental groups and by organist-professors McDonald and Hubert Poteat; daily recorded classical programs, which made use of a set of 700 records from the Carnegie Foundation; Sunday chimes recitals; and in observance of National Music Week in May, Wake Forest's first all-campus sing, which was entered into by most of the college organizations.

THE BAND was most frequently seen in uniform during the football season, when it played for three varsity games, one freshman game, four pep rallies, and the State-Raleigh Day Parade, held in conjunction with the N. C. State game. Highlight of this series of performances came in the Homecoming Day encounter with Clemson, when the Band topped all previous appearances in music interpretation and in stunting. On December 11 the Band presented its annual Christmas concert in the Wake Forest High School auditorium, and on March 31 it gave a morning concert there.

THE LITTLE SYMPHONY, reorganized this year by Prof. McDonald, opened its series of concerts for the year with a part in the November 8 show of the Army Finance School. In the last two weeks before Christmas it made three appearances: a concert in the church on December 3; a part in another AFS show on December 6; and a share in the department's Christmas-Vesper concert on December 9. During the second semester the Symphony played for intermission at the Little Theatre's production of Wuthering Heights, and in March took charge of an entire college program.

AT THE DECEMBER 3 concert in the church, the Men's Glee Club reached the peak of its 1942-43 season with renditions of religious and novelty numbers which caused many to hail this year's group as the best Wake Forest College has had. Previous to this program, the Club had sung at two Sunday evening church services and at the graduation exercises of the 42nd class of the Army Finance School. One week later, it took part with the Girls' Glee Club and the Little Symphony in the annual Christmas Vesper concert. Although out-of-town programs were impossible this year because of the transportation difficulties imposed by the war, these and other activities at home were lessened no bit. Officers of the group were: Paul Brunner, president; Charles Fronberger, vice president; Robert Holt, secretary; and Bruce Warlick, business manager.

Under Miss Ethel Rowland of Meredith College was organized the college's first Girls' Glee Club. The group made rapid progress, and at its first public appearance in the church concert on December 3 gave evidence of its rise to the same high standards held by the other departmental organizations. On December 9 the girls sang in the Christmas Vesper concert.

BY FAR THE MOST ACTIVE of the music department's concert groups this year was the Octet, which took exclusive charge of all of Wake Forest's concerts away from home. A partial list of the special occasions for which the eight men sang follows: the B.S.U. Convention in Raleigh on October 23; a Winston-Salem Alumni banquet on November 7; the Baptist State Convention in High Point on November 18; the Wake Forest Football Banquet on December 10; the Baptist Hour over radio station WPTF on January 24, and again on April 11; and a series of concerts in the Wilmington area in May.

The String Quartet, a new feature started by Prof. McDonald, held its premiere at the joint concert of the various organizations on December 3.

We Were Writers;

We Edited Three College Publications

LONG AFTER the same students who romp in other fields have retired for the night, staff men of the three publications—Old Gold and Black, The Student, and THE HOWLER—creep limply from their offices and hobble to their rooms, where they hope they might be in time to catch a few hours' snoozing before an early morning bell sends them scurrying to class. By these sleepless nights they live up to the reputations which predecessors have set for them as the tired journalists of Wake Forest.

1942-43's staff members were even greater nighthawks than usual, mainly because there were fewer of them. Three leaders—Bob Gallimore, Zeb Jones, and Paul Bell—had answered the call of the armed forces by February. Billy Primm, who took over Old Gold and Black in Gallimore's place, left with the Enlisted Reserve Corps in April, and H. B. Parrott edited the paper for the rest of the year. Along with these departing editors and business managers went staff reliables Jesse Glasgow, Shelton Canter, Sam Behrends, and Ken Nelson, rendering the writers' shortage even more acute.

We recorded our life in a Yearbook

IN THE PROCESS of putting out a college yearbook, the working coöperation of a number of people is needed. At college, there must be editorial writers, artists, photographers, ad salesmen, typists, and collectors and organizers of various material. On the technical side, there must be advisory representatives of the printing and engraving industries and professional photographers.

The 1913 HOWLER is indebted to men in all these fields for assistance in the creation and the publication of this book. Our most sincere thanks go to Shelton Canter and Jesse Glasgow for aid in the planning and drawing of layouts; to Jim Middleton for his photographic coverage of Wake Forest life; to Herbert Thompson and H. B. Parrott for their literary contributions; to Bill Clark, next year's editor, for help in all phases of production; to Martha Ann Allen for her skillful work in the mounting of photographs; to Billy Primm for his editorship of the sports section; and to Rudd Friday and Alice Lee Harris of the business staff for helping to make the largest sales of advertisements a HOWLER has yet had.

Apart from student members of the staff, we are especially grateful to Dr. E. E. Folk for his advice on all angles of yearbook publication; to Charles M. Allen for the beautiful portraits of the buildings of Wake Forest which we have used as full-page pictures in this book; to Mr. E. B. Earnshaw for his financial advice; to Johnny Minter of Edwards & Broughton, Gordon Brightman of Jahn & Ollier, Faye Smith of Daniel & Smith, and Abe Lubersky of the David J. We published a paper every week

AS THE DRAFT hit Wake Forest hard this year, it mercilessly ripped through the masthead of Old Gold and Black, the college's weekly newspaper, and the publication went through the most hectic term in its twenty-six-year history, having two editors and two business managers at different intervals. Editor Bob Gallimore sat in the chief's chair from the beginning of summer school until he was drafted for service in the army in December. Sports editor Billy Primm was elected to replace him. Next to leave was business manager Zeb Jones, who reported for service in the Naval Air Corps at the close of the first semester. Assistant Doug McIntyre succeeded him. Also, staff members left all along during the term, and with each departure the paper's struggle became more intensified.

Yet Wednesday night still heard the chattering of typewriters from the office on the North end of Publications Row as reporters brushed in and out of the door, coming from and going to cover assignments; the desperate plea from the editor's chair to cut out the bull shooting and get to work; and as midnight drew near, the sudden calmness that spread over the office as all staff members left but the faithful three or four who stayed around to see the paper to bed. Thursday continued to be the days for the journey of the editor to the printers and the printing of the paper. Friday mornings still found the finished product in postoffice boxes. And although Old Gold and Black had to strain and struggle this year, it continued to uphold the prestige and reputation it had made for itself.

Once a month we were literary

WITH A SORE LACK in quantity of writers, and with considerable financial difficulties, editor Thompson gathered a staff about him, and with the help of business manager Paul Bell, began the 60th year of publication of the college literary-humor magazine. Bell was called out of school for training in the Army Air Corps at the beginning of the second semester, and Hoyt Dozier replaced him as business manager. During Christmas holidays, another hard blow came when the athletic department moved in The Student office, and staff members had to gather in various places to work on the February issue. Then the magazine crowded into the HOWLER office next door.

This year's Student found reader appeal through feature articles, short stories, essays, poetry, and anecdotes, and found contributors in the armed forces as well as among the students. For the first time in its history it had women on the staff, with Martha Ann Allen writing feature articles; Elizabeth Jones, short story and essay; and Betty Stansbury on the business staff. Ed Wilson and John McMillan wrote articles, and H. B. Parrott added a light touch to campus subjects. Billy Primm wrote of sports. Alan Stansbury and Frank Todd supplied illustrations for material in their capacities as staff artists. Paul Brunner contributed verse. Bob Gallimore and Jim Middleton handled the photographic angle, and Drs. Folk and Jones of the English department gave advice when it was most needed.

We were Dramatic for the first time in years

PROBABLY the most significant single event of the year 1912-13 was the establishment at Wake Forest of a really active dramatic society—the Little Theater. Credit for the success of the venture goes to a group of students who decided that the theater had been too long neglected in Wake Forest and set to work to do something about it. In the high school auditorium

Tony (Arthur Adams) looks moon-struck and Alice (Beth Perry) grins happily as they prepare for a love clinch. The play is "You Can't Take It With You."

Director Arthur Earley, in tuxedo, makes a last-minute inspection of scenery for "Wuthering Heights." Hard-working assistants Charlotte Easley and John Lanier stand by to give aid.

Cathy Earnshaw, heroine of "Wuthering Heights," dies despite the efforts of Heathcliff to revive her. Isabel and Edgar Linton and Ellen Dean look on helplessly.

they hammered stage sets and painted and experimented with lights and sound effects. In the meantime, selected casts rehearsed for long hours. The results were four impressive major productions in the summer, fall, and spring. Jane Eyre, You Can't Take It With You, Wuthering Heights, and Arsenic and Old Lace were presented with Beth Perry, Bill DeLoach, and Arthur Earley as directors. In addition, two one-act plays, The End of the Dance and The Valiant, were produced.

Presidents for the three semesters were Jack Easley, Beth Perry, and Elizabeth Jones.

Grandpa Vanderhof and others of the mad household of "You Can't Take It With You" join with the visiting Kirbys in a game of reactions. The results are startling.

The marriage of Rochester and Jane Eyre is suddenly interrupted by Mason, who announces that the groom is already married and has a wife "on the third floor."

After the first successful big-time production of the Wake Forest Little Theater, cast members of "Jane Eyre" celebrate backstage with singing and shouting.

Jane Eyre (Alice Lee Harris) is wooed by the cynical Rochester (Dewey Tyson, here in summer school only).

President Jack Easley instructs actors and actresses to remember their lines and not get stage fright.

Rheba, the Vanderhofs' cook, takes over the living room of her mistress to entertain her boy friend, Donald, who lounges luxuriously in easy chair.

Boris Kolenkhov, Russian ballet teacher, brings with him to the Vanderhof household Olga, a member of the Russian nobility, now a waitress in a downtown cafe.

Penny Sycamore gets some ludicrous responses from the game she plays with the Kirby family.

Joseph, the crazed servant of the Earnshaws, is struck by the tempestuous Heathcliff as he yells frightfully from the staircase of the house at Wuthering.

Heathcliff, up to his old tricks, throttles Edgar Linton in a mad rage of anger. Cathy, repelled, draws back in fear of her lover's brutality.

Hindley Earnshaw, drunk and in riding clothes, warns Cathy to stay away from Heathcliff.

The forlorn Isabel, bereft of the love of Heathcliff, is consoled by motherly Ellen Dean.

Some of us Were Fraternity Men

DILIGENCE IN STUDIES, skill in athletics, sincerity in religion, and versatility in extra-curricular activity are essential characteristics of the ideal college student. Side by side with these traits belongs another more intangible quality, the ability to associate with fellow students and to live with them in harmony and mutual understanding.

At Wake Forest it is the social fraternity which best carries out the assignment of building up this brotherly affection among students from different backgrounds and with different interests. Despite a veneer which stresses hilarious good times and gay week ends of dancing and partying, the Greek-letter fraternity exists mainly to build men's personality and to improve their social bearing.

Familiar October scene: Freshmen and transfers wait in line for bids to Greek-letter fraternities.

Fraternity life begins with the "rush season," a freakish period in which freshmen are tempted into becoming pledges by the smiles and handshakes and good fellowship of old members, who lead them into a whirl of entertainment and fun. For a month they eat, smoke, and are amused at the expense of the rushers. For a day they are allowed to catch their breath and think for themselves. Then, if they are convinced they have found a good thing, they accept a bid and pass into pledgeship.

Being a pledge is usually different from what rushing season might lead the freshmen to expect. They find that, instead of being showered with favors, they are rained upon with rules and orders. They learn that they must unhesitatingly obey the will of the old members, but sooner or later they realize that this subjection and supervision has a real purpose, that of making them more confirmed fraternity men.

Culmination of the pledge period comes with "hell week," five days and nights of gruelling initiation stunts. By this time the final steps have been taken, and the former rushees and pledges are ready for formal induction into the fraternity as full-fledged members. They are now prepared to enjoy the full benefits of fraternity life.

1912-13's events emphasized the fraternal values of this kind of life more than the purely social ones. Mid-Winters, the outstanding dances of the year, were cancelled, and the lavishness of the past gave way to simplicity in the case of all fraternity festivities. But the spirit of comradeship and the love of entertainment which are characteristic of the men of fraternities were as noticeably present as ever.

KA's go in for dancing at home as well as at the ballroom. Here several pledges, members, and dates swing around in chapter room.

Smiles, smokes, food, drink, and talk are the main thing at SPE smoker during fall rush season. Member Joe Christian tells freshmen Bill Shore, Heyward Smith, and Charles Allen all about the fraternity. Member John Yeattes winks reassuringly from background.

Tommy Bland and Fletcher Wall, freshman KA's, are in the groove as they float away on wings of slow, sweet song.

Fraternities Met in Council

PAN-HELLENIC COUNCIL The lilting music of a dance band, the merry confusion of formal dances, immaculately dressed youths in stiff white shirts, white bow ties, and long, swirling coat tails have long been associated with the Pan-Hellenic Council in the mind of the average college student. And such has been the method of the council's contact with the student body.

This year there was none of the gaiety and color of Mid-Winter dances, and after the first semester all social affairs sponsored by the council were called off for the duration of the war. But even with social life gone, the group still had to continue an important work.

Horace Miller presided over council meetings until he was called to the Air Corps in February. Then Doc Adams stepped up from the vice president's post to take charge. Dr. L. Owens-Rea, faculty adviser, gave sound advice on the many problems which arose.

THE BOYS who live 'way out on the out-skirts of town stayed in close touch with campus affairs in 1912-13 and rounded out a progressive year in the chapter's history. Johnny Walker, chairman of the Freshman Advisory Council and Old Gold and Black staff member, was tapped for membership in ODK and listed in Who's Who. The lettermen of the lodge, Tony Rubino and Dom Flammaia, were respectively on the football and basketball squads. Doc Adams, in addition to his duties as president of the chapter, wielded the gavel over the Pan-Hel Council meetings every Tuesday night. Stacy Kinlaw was president of the sophomore class; Jim Cook was among the outstanding scholars of the chemistry department; and Forrest Stevens, Jack Cleckley, and Jimmy Northington were instrumental in promoting fraternal affairs.

Those who wore the pledge pins of Sigma Pi this year were Albert Cernugel, Bill Davi, Dom Flammaia, John Narron, Larry Nichols, Ray Oddono, Buddy Phillips, Lester Stewart, and Bob Turnage.

ALPHA KAPPA PI

THE TALENTS found among the members of the AKPi's this year were as varied as their chapter rooms. Twice they occupied different halls, only to have war necessities force them out. The third time they settled in Mrs. Medlin's house, and here at last they found a permanent dwelling.

Among the individual members, French instructor John Conley was in PBK and in Who's Who. Ed Aydlett and Charlie Morris played in the college band. Jack Gentry and Ray Koteski represented the lodge on the basketball court, and Bo Sacrinty, Ed Royston, and Dick Wedel starred on the gridiron.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

THE LAMBDA CHI's could almost have had a quorum on the football field this year. Their lettermen were Copley, Jones, and Starford. Dashing up and down the sidelines leading the cheers were Reece, Ward, Alden, and Musselman. Oscar King wore the coveted ODK key, was vice president of the student body, and held a post on the Student Council. Gil Horton served as president of the Association of Student Councils of American Colleges and Universities. Peck Sherrill held down the gruelling job of business manager of THE HOWLER.

The quite large pledge class read as follows: Russell Abbitt, Bill Alden, Bob Burns, Jim Copley, Chris Giles, Carroll Glover, Bill Gray, Dick Hardin, Buck Jones, Tom Mullins, Pete Overton, Joe Padgett, Kemp Reece, Bill Riggsbee, Dick Saleeby, Bob Smith, Jim Tobey, and Gene Turner.

THE ΠΚΑ's had one of the most versatile groups this year that they have had in a long time. Sam Behrends, ODK and Who's Who man, Arthur Adams, and Lovick Miller debated. Doug McIntyre succeeded Zeb Jones as business manager of Old Gold and Black. Russ Perry, Elmer Barbour, Don Wells, Joe Hinerman, Bill Dougherty, and Bud Pate all made names for them-selves on various athletic squads. Demming Ward was on the Student Council.

THE HOUSE on the corner of Main and Elm streets scored an all-time Wake Forest high this year, pledging 36 men and recording 26 on the active list. C. C. Hope, Doug Elam, J. Dixon Davis, and Burnette Harvey were members of the debate squad. Phi Beta Kappas Harvey and Neil Morgan rated ODK and Who's Who along with Old Gold and Black editor Bob Gallimore.

Along Publications Row Student business manager Paul Bell, former Student editor Morgan, and H. B. Parrott acquitted themselves with distinction. Pan-Hel prexy Horace Miller and SPE prexy Roscoe Mason kept the political pot boiling.

The pledge class was composed of G. C. Ange, Carl Bailey, Wallace Banks, Gilmer Brande, Milton Bulluck, Bill Byrd, Wayne Daugherty, J. Dixon Davis, Doug Elam, John Garmany, Hubert Gibson, Fred Hoffmann, Grover Page, Robert Sheets, William Shore, Heyward Smith, and Wylie Yarborough.

DELTA SIGMA PHI

IN THEIR new home just off the Raleigh Highway, the Delta Sig's managed to do pretty well for themselves this year, especially in the fields of publications and athletics. Pat Preston, captain of this year's football squad, and Herb Thompson, editor of The Student, were members of ODK and were listed in Who's Who. Hoyt Dozier was business manager of The Student, and Jim Middleton was No. 1 photographer for THE HOWLER.

Wearing the green and white pledge badges this year were Emmett Baker, Jeff Brogdon, Bob Brooks, Jim Camp, Nathan Cole, Al Denton, Willys Hooper, Bill McClanahan, Harry McCord, Bryan Marshburn, Tom Marshburn, Jim Middleton, Bob Milholen, Jim Shields, Bill Waterfield, J. A. West, and Jim White.

KAPPA ALPHA

THE KA'S WENT out for high grades this year and were awarded the scholarship cup for the first semester. Two of the members, Rowland Pruette and John Barrett, were initiated into Phi Beta Kappa. On the Student Council Billy Joe Patton served ably as president, and Pruette and Melville Broughton aided and abetted him as members. Patton and Pruette were elected to ODK and were listed in Who's Who.

KAPPA SIGMA

HONORS FELL thick on the Kappa Sig household this year, as the chapter placed three men—Walter Carpenter, Billy Primm, and Ed Wilson—in Phi Beta Kappa. Primm, editor of Old Gold and Black, and Wilson, editor of THE HOWLER, were also in ODK and Who's Who. Dewitt Trivette, first semester president of the Phi Society, was tapped for membership in ODK. Buster Currin was a leading Student Councilman, and Bill Craig hustled in the music department as piano accompanist for the choral groups. President Jack Baldwin took time out to caper in Deacon's garb before the band at football contests. Bill Clark, Shelton Canter, Jimmy Hulin, Dan Primm, and Sanford Martin were active in publications.

Wearing the pledge symbol this year were Tilman C. Britt, Walter Clark, Bill de Loach, Simmons Fentress, Jack Fowler, Buck Garrison, Don Higgs, Sid Johnson, Charles Liles, Glynn McFadden, Jim Nolan, Bruce Sloan, and Philip Sowers.

THE WAKE FOREST SCHOOL OF LAW

SEPARATE and distinct from the college of liberal arts, and yet through its students closely associated with it, is the Wake Forest School of Law. In classrooms up on the second floor of the Library building, future lawyers study legal documents and legal decisions of the past and learn the fundamentals of court technique. ing of the principles which govern the American Bar.

In 1912-13 only twenty-seven of the students of Wake Forest were in the School of Law, and this number had decreased by almost half at the end of the term. Under the three remaining law professors, Dean Stansbury, Prof. Edgar Timberlake, and Prof. Beverly Lake, they prepared for the Bar examination and for careers in the law profession. In April, as a result of a constantly decreasing enrollment here and similarly discouraging conditions at Duke University, plans were made to merge the two law schools at Duke for the duration of the war.

WE WERE WAKE FOREST MEN

I 942-43 SAW MEN OF WAKE FOREST facing strange situations and playing unusual roles, but on the whole we were much the same as in years past. Some of us dedicated our time to studying, and we were seen in our rooms and in the library. Some of us were physically strong and liked athletics, and we were found on Gore Field and in the gymnasium. Some of us turned to worship, and the church and classroom were our favorite haunts. Some of us were interested in training our voices in speech work; others of us thrilled to music and song; others were writers and frequented publications offices; still others had dramatic ability and took part in Little Theater productions. Some of us liked the fun of fraternity life and devoted our efforts to promoting friendship among boys.

All of us, every one—whatever we were, wherever we were found—whether with a textbook or a football or a Bible or an oration or a violin or a typewriter or a playbook or a fraternity pin—whether on class or on the campus or in the movies or in Snyder's or Shorty's or in the postoffice or at a dance or on a bus bound for home—all of us were sons of Wake Forest.

OMICRON DELTA KAPPA THE TOP AWARD for the well-rounded student is membership in Omicron Delta Kappa. With men chosen from the best in all fields of campus life, the group meets once a month to discuss problems arising in every phase of college activities.

In 1912-13 ODK was presided over by Warren Pritchard, who left for the Navy in November, and John McMillan, his successor. In the annual spring elections (held too late for the pictures of the men chosen to be included in the panel on this page) eight students and one faculty member were tapped. The students: Melville Broughton, Walter Carpenter, John Conley, Bill Craig, Arthur Earley, Rudd Friday, Lawrence Highfill, and C. C. Hope; the faculty member: Dr. O. T. Other professors on the roll of members of ODK are Prof. Max Griffin, who serves as secretary; Dr. Edgar E. Folk, Dr. Thurman Kitchin, Prof. Thane McDonald, Dr. Hubert Potat, Dr. L. Owens Rea, Dr. Dale F. Stansbury, and Dr. Henry Stroupe.

WHO'S WHO AMONG STUDENTS Who's Who Among Students in American

Universities and Colleges is a national recognition for students who stand out as leaders because of "character, scholarship, leadership in extra-curricular activities, and potentiality for future usefulness to business and society." The names and biographies of those chosen as Who's Who are included in a volume which serves as an index to the outstanding students in the colleges of the United States.

Men elected to Who's Who hold no meetings, elect no officers, have no organization. Membership is purely an honor.

The eighteen men who were elected in 1942-43 were chosen by a special committee appointed by Dean Bryan and composed of Dr. Cronje B. Earp, professor of Greek; Dr. Edgar E. Folk, professor of English and faculty adviser for the publications; Prof. Jasper L. Memory, professor of education and head of the news bureau; Dr. L. Owens Rea, professor of economics and faculty adviser for the Pan-Hellenic Council; Bob Gallimore, editor of Old Gold and Black; and Billy Joe Patton, president of the student body.

Actors in the Drama of Wake Forest: 1942-43

THIS HAS BEEN the story of Wake Forest College in war; the record of 1942-43, a year of change, a year of readjustment, a year of uncertainty—a year of greatness.

We who were men of Wake Forest this year more fully understood our love for the college.

Students assiduously apply themselves in the defense course's mechanical drawing class. Instructor Tom Arrington supervises.

Students cross the magnolia-studded campus on their way to class.

As we watched classmates leave for the service, as we saw long associations broken, as we awaited our own calls to duty, we became more conscious of the meaning of Wake Forest. We felt, more than ever before, its impression on our lives, past, present, and future, and we were proud to be part of its history and tradition.

Cheer leaders stop their yelling long enough to watch the football team pile up yardage against Duke. In the stands students and soldiers look on with suspense.

THE BOWMAN GRAY MEDICAL SCHOOL OF WAKE FOREST

Front of the main building.

A LARGE PERCENTAGE of the men of Wake Forest in 1912-13 were pre-medical students. With local draft boards and reserves favoring those who were planning a career in medicine and with the increasing demand of the services for trained doctors, more students turned their attention to science courses leading into medical work.

Most of those who were pre-medical majors at Wake Forest transferred to Bowman Gray in Winston-Salem, the Wake Forest Medical School, for their work in medicine. Here, in a modern plant with modern equipment, they continued their studies in an atmosphere that was much like Wake Forest's, even to the magnolias newly planted in a row in front of the main building. Here they followed an exacting schedule of classes and labs with little time off for play.

Medical Students Work and Study in Modern Plant

THE LIFE of the medical student is traditionally hard. His classes occupy most of his time, and what few hours are left he must use for outside studying. From the famous anatomy course on through the rest of the "ology" sciences he passes through a series of tough and dangerous assignments.

At Winston-Salem everything possible has been done to make courses interesting and to bring out the greatest efficiency in the students. Up-to-the-minute improvements in equipment and in laboratory methods have been introduced. Among the many new features are a complete, well-lighted library; classrooms with chairs on raised levels; refrigerators for the storing of cadavers; and numerous materials for experiment and research.

Aside from actual medical work, the students of Bowman Gray find time to engage in occasional relaxation. Two fraternities—Phi Chi and Phi Rho Sigma—are active and attract members from every class. And, on every week-end, when professors and classes permit, students celebrate with out-of-town trips and dates and dances.

THE U. S. ARMY FINANCE SCHOOL: WAKE FOREST COLLEGE DIVISION

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL A. E. R. HOWARTH
Commanding Officer

ON AUGUST 17, 1942, the war hit Wake Forest with full force. Down from the North came soldiers and officers who searched for a new base. They descended upon the town and college, looked over the place, liked it, and settled down to stay.

Rapidly and smoothly, a division of the U. S. Army Finance School had become a part of the life of Wake Forest. In little time, their presence on the campus was as natural as was that of the coeds, who had led a similar invasion in 1911-12. The entire personnel—from Lieutenant-Colonel Albert Howarth and his staff of officers to the many enlisted men in the ranks—fitted into the atmosphere of the college and took up its spirit. Their activities—their drills, their marches, their classes, their entertainments, their rare moments of leisure—came to be of meaningful significance in the story of a war year.

Fighting Finance Men Learn the Ways of the Army

WITH THE OCCUPATION of Simmons, Bostwick, and Hunter Dormitories, the cafeteria, the Alumni Building, Gore Gymnasium, the Social Science Building, and the Music-Religion Building, the men of the Finance School took over more than half of the building space of Wake Forest. In addition they received part share in the College Book Store, Student Center, and the campus.

We who were students came in close contact with these soldiers of finance. We watched them at their day's work. We joined with them in the rush for cokes and ice cream at the college's only soda fountain. We played doubles and singles at ping pong with them. We attended their class "frolics" and read their Washroom Gazette. Our girls went to their Saturday night dances and helped to entertain them at the USO club in the community house. Our boys learned from observation some of the features of military discipline which would soon become a part of their own lives.

There's PLENTY of POWER

© REDDY KILOWATT

The present conflict raging 'round the world, is a war of power . . . power in the air, on land and sea. Behind this war power, is production power at home. Thanks to American business management, there is plenty of this power. There is enough electricity for all war enterprises, and for all regular customers. That's why American factories are able to out-produce the Axis nations. Our people work with more power than people in any other nation. And they have plenty of power available at home so they may relax after a full day's work. Remember, too, this power will be instantly ready after the war to play an important role in our big peace efforts.

Third war for Dave Woodruff

Much-loved master mechanic, Dave Woodruff is a real veteran.

He installed the first steam turbine at the Chatham plant, helped make it one of the most modern blanket mills in the world.

For over fifty years he has watched Chatham grow from a family affair to a famous name.

This is his third war. And the biggest test of all for the machines he loves: fine blankets in huge quantity for Uncle Sam.

And Dave's machines are delivering... their high-speed output helped win for Chatham the Army-Navy E.

No wonder, then, that Dave was chosen by fellow employees for the honor of receiving this high award.

There are new Chatham Blankets available for you, but because Chatham's first job is to make blankets for the armed forces, consumer supplies are limited.

If you need a new blanket, be sure to see the Chatham STANLEY, SUTTON or AIRLOOM. These blankets, priced from $5.00 to $8.00, carry the Chatham Informative Label, which gives all the facts and is your unflinching guide to a better blanket buy.

BUILDERS DREAMS

VISIONS created by the imagination precede the achievement of any really great accomplishment. The ability to weave the threads of imagination into the finished fabric is equally important.

It has been the privilege of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY to cooperate with the Howler staff in creating their vision into material form.

Such cooperation is one of the "visions" which precede the building of a successful business, and is a part of the working policy of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY.

To those Staffs desiring complete cooperation, we offer unexcelled service.

You, too, may be proud of your annual.
